Three carry it. I've chosen a handle. —J.

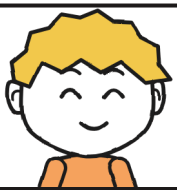

Shared. We fit. –J.

If you find it, return it folded.

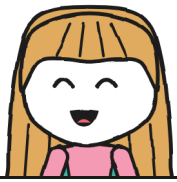

ONLY IN THE STORY

Really, see page 76. –J.

WHO'S WHO

Gus measures in centimetres.

Julie knows the way.

Noa measures in steps.

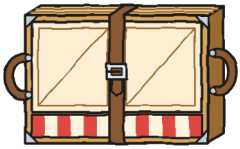

Irene says "stop".

Tony keeps the time.

Mara lends the package.

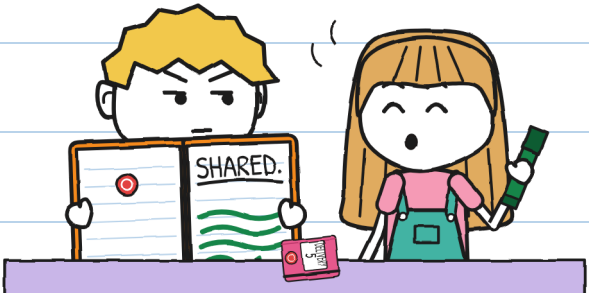

A folding theatre.

R. left a line.

DELIVERY NOTEBOOK 6
by Gus

SHARED.

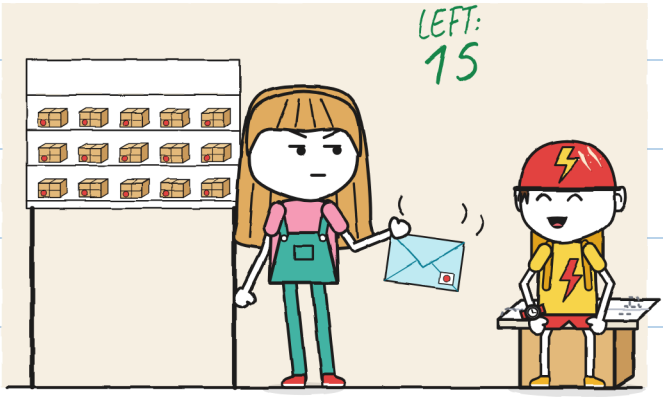

Notebook 5 is over. This one is orange.
I wrote one word. I left half a page free. It didn't stay free for even a minute.

I wrote on your first page. —J.

CHAPTER 1

Why Does It Take Three?

On Monday I left school. Julie was waiting with a turquoise envelope.
"I'm not opening it," said Julie.
"Twenty-eight minutes," said Tony.

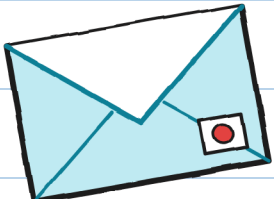

It wasn't mine. It weighed a lot. —J.

Mara opens the envelope.

I'm Irene, from the theatre.
A line is missing:
"Little theatre: pending receipt."
Do you have it?
Saturday the 31st: rally.
If it comes folded,
with three, I'll sign.
Noa needs two more.

Julie: it's me!
Bring someone. —Noa

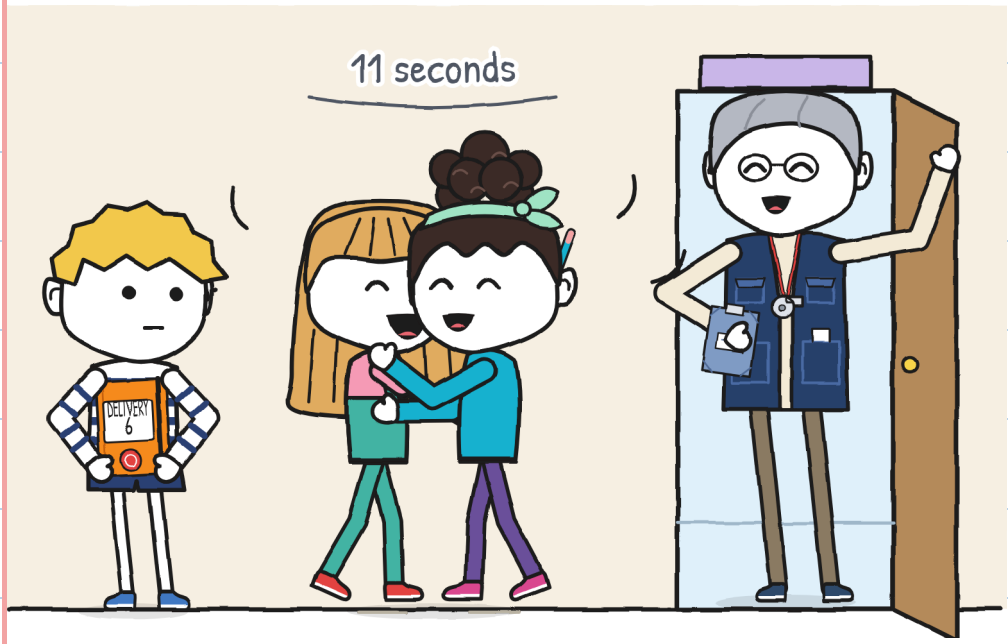

"Someone who knows about packages." That was me.

Irene and Noa came at five.

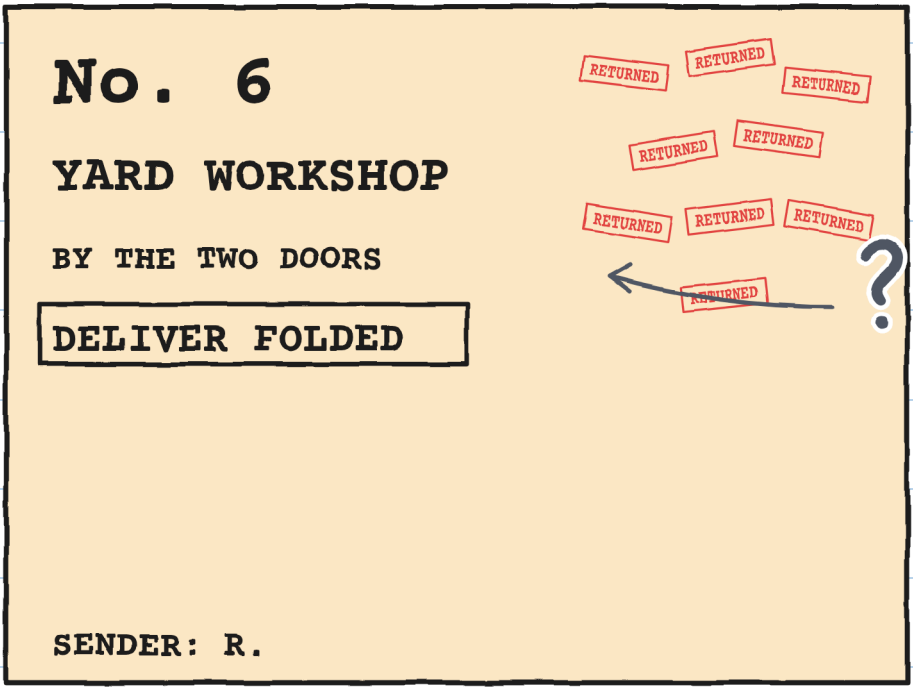

Julie and Noa hugged. Eleven seconds.

"This is Gus," said Julie.
"Hello, Gus," said Noa.

Mara took down No. 6.

A box like all the others.

"Nine stamps," said Julie.

"What two doors?" said Noa.

Nobody knew.

"I took it nine times," said Mara.
Nobody signed for a workshop.
"The theatre rehearses
in the yard," said Irene.
Irene showed a stamped sheet. Now somebody signs.

"Why doesn't Mara carry it?" asked Julie.

"I already took it nine times," said Mara.

"My kids have to manage it," said Irene.

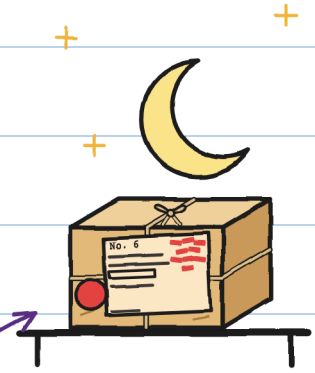

THE LOAN

No. 6, lent.

Goes out with Irene.

Comes back folded.

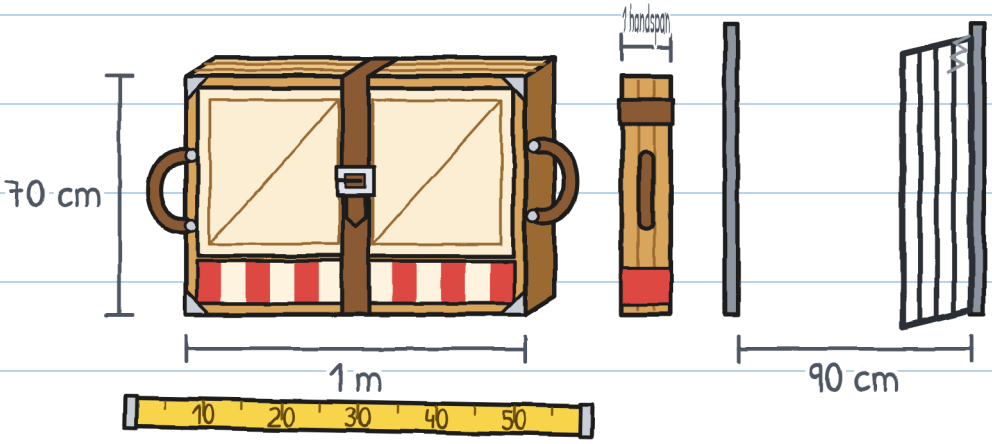

Sleeps here.

It sleeps on its shelf. —J.

On Tuesday we went to the yard.
There is a gate. It closes by itself.
The little theatre came out and grew. I took out my tape.

MEASUREMENTS OF NO. 6

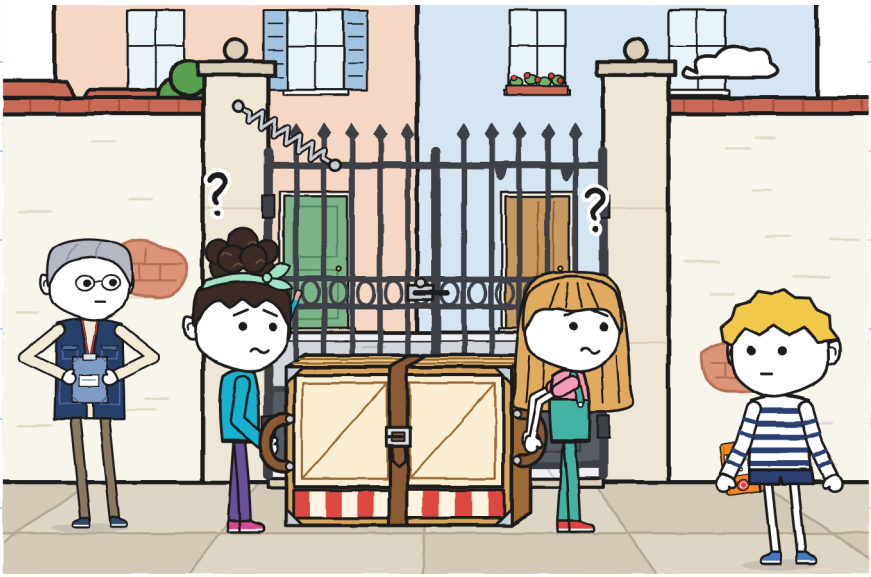

It fitted on its side.

The panels opened by themselves:
clack, clack, clack.

Through the window you could see Tony.
"It's all there," said Irene. Hands on the handles, not on the hinges.

Irene and Mara folded
the little theatre.
"We'll try it," said Julie. Noa was already at the other handle.
They lifted it. They reached the gate. It was shut.
My hands were free.

I held the gate with my back.
They went through.

That afternoon I invented the gauge.

THE THREE-GAUGE

who does what

	CARRY 	GUIDE 	CLEAR THE WAY
yard, first try	Julie and Noa	Julie and Noa
yard, second try	Julie and Noa	Julie and Noa	Gus

An empty box: it doesn't pass.

I noted: "A gate can be held by a stone too."

We still had to work out the label.

"It's the two halves," said Julie.

"Later," said Noa.

I went alone. When I came back, they had already decided. I closed my mouth.

That tally mark was mine. —J.
